SANSIRI has made a deal with Bangkok Mass Transit System whereby owners of its homes can access them with their BTS Rabbit Cards, and can also use Sansiri's Home Service app on their smartphones to access the Skytrain.

The new service is under development and is expected to be available to Sansiri home-owners by the end of the year, said Uthai Uthaisangsuk, Sansiri senior executive vice president for business development and high-rise project development.

He said the company was also developing the Home Service application as a sale and rental portal as well as concierge service.

He said the Home Service app already boasted various features for the convenience of people living in its residential projects such as lifestyle information, announcements, utility-bill payment and home care.

"The application helps our residents live at home comfortably. Up to five people per unit can register as Home Service members to use the mobile application. The app allows home-owners to check information easily, such as utility charges, via their smartphones," Uthai said.

Sansiri invested Bt20 million to develop the Home Service app for the residents of its approximately 70 projects comprising more than 20,000 units. About 6,000 residents have applied for Home Service membership.

The app supports three languages: Thai, English and Japanese.
